"A rare astronomical phenomenon Sunday night will produce a moon that will appear slightly bigger than usual and have a reddish hue, an event known as a super blood moon. It's a combination of curiosities that hasn't happened since 1982, and won't happen again until 2033. A so-called supermoon, which occurs when the moon is closest to earth in its orbit, will coincide with a lunar eclipse, leaving the moon in Earth's shadow. Individually, the two phenomena are not uncommon, but they do not align often [...] 'You're basically seeing all of the sunrises and sunsets across the world, all at once, being reflected off the surface of the moon,' said Dr. Sarah Noble, a program scientist at NASA'..."

' A greater treasure, though not of the traditional kind, was #beeswax. There were no apiaries in the Americas during the early years of Spanish colonization, so galleons would travel to the #Philippines to trade silver and other metals for precious beeswax, which was used mainly in soap and to make candles for Jesuit mission churches.

Around 1700, one such ship was blown off course on a voyage from Manila to Acapulco. When it wrecked on or near the Nehalem spit, its cargo of beeswax (mainly large blocks with Spanish markings), along with shards of Chinese ceramics, were strewn for miles along the coast and washed into river valleys. Well into the 19th century, native residents and pioneer settlers traded these items and used the wreck's Philippine #teak timbers to build furniture. '

An acquired and, apparently, a healthy taste. #bittermelon

'One of the most common supportive therapies for treating hypertension is the use of synthetic drugs to inhibit ACE activity. Synthetic ACE inhibitors possess good antihypertensive effects, but come with accompanying side effects. Therefore, food-derived ACE inhibitory peptides are regarded as safer alternatives and are attracting much attention for hypertension treatment. In this study, we comprehensively identified peptides derived from bitter melon (Momordica charantia) seed proteins (BMSPs) using a shotgun proteomics approach. Based on results from an in vitro ACE inhibitory assay, two peptides (VY-7 and VG-8) derived from momordin A and MAP30 proteins, respectively, showed good ACE inhibitory activities.'

'In many ways, Filipino farmworkers and labor organizers had prepared for the Delano Grape Strike for decades. Dawn Mabalon, professor of history at San Francisco State University, says they'd been fighting for better working conditions since the 1920s, and had a key win in 1939 in the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta.

"Five to seven thousand Filipinos in asparagus fields all walk out at the height of the season, on Good Friday," threatening the availability of asparagus on Easter dinner tables, Mabalon says. "Growers capitulated in a day. So Filipinos know that if they all walk out, in absolute unity, with absolute militancy, they're probably going to win."
